FINANCIAL NEWS HOW TO PLAN YOUR WILL

By Fred Snyder

Under the laws of this state, you may dispose of your property by will. You should not neglect to make a will if you own real property, i.e., real estate of any kind, personal property, such as stocks and bonds bank accounts, jewelry & etc. If you do not leave a will you can not direct who will get your property. It will be distributed by law which is inflexible and cannot take into account your wishes or your family's needs.

Part of your property may go to your children-not all to your spouse as you might suppose, or part may go to relatives whom you barely know or don't like very much, while someone for whom you wish to provide may get less than they need or nothing at all.

By making a will you can make sure that your property goes to people you want it to benefit, in the proportions and manner that will help them most. You can choose your own executor and give him/her the powers necessary to settle your estate in the most effective and economical way. The executor can continue the operation of your business until it can be disposed of advantageously, and protect the interests of minor beneficiaries and safeguard their future.

When planning your will, list all property, personal and real,

which you own. Then consider the following points:

1. How to dispose of personal items.
2. Cash gifts to individuals or charities.
3. Gifts of income, rather than lump sums.
4. What to do with your residence.
5. How to preserve or liquidate a business interest.
6. Whom do you want to benefit.
7. What should each receive.
8. When they should receive it.
9. How to distribute the rest of your property which returns to the estate.

There are many aspects of

FRED T. SNYDER

your individual situation that cannot be discussed until all of the facts are known, but if you intend to pass your estate to your family or friends without legal interference a will can help you achieve that goal.
