Edward Jones, President, National Baptist Convention of America; Dr. S.M. Lockridge, President, National Missionary Baptist Convention of America, and Bishop S.C. Regional coordinators of this campaign are:

Rev. Ralph E. Blanks, of Philadelphia, Eastern Region; Bishop Fred C. James, of Columbia, South Carolina, Southern Region; Dr. Otis Moss, of Cleveland, Midwestern Region, and Dr. Amos C. Brown, San Francisco, California, Western Region.

The main targets of the get-out-the-vote campaign, according to Rev. Fauntroy, "are 51 cities and 28 states where the black vote is subject to make a decisive difference in local, congressional and presidential elections."

Rev. Fauntroy said, "We have enlisted Christian Soldiers in our 'Gideon's Army' of church men and women who will take personal responsibility for contacting and getting to the polls on November 3rd at least five registered voters who live in their voting precinct whom we will identify for them."

As Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. said, "the most important step an oppressed people can take is the short walk to the ballot box."

Rev. Fauntroy added, "We are confident that through the leadership of hundreds of African American ministers and the political missionary work of thousands of Christian Soldiers in the targeted 51 cities that African Americans will go to the polls in great numbers and our votes will make a difference."

He said local efforts to inform and inspire blacks to vote will include city-wide gospel concerts and church rallies, prayer meetings, bus tours, door-to-door canvasses, dissemination of flyers, and special promotions in black media.

I am not." Yvonne says, "Lee's supporter like him because he is intelligent, hard working, and enjoys working with the community."

The Gates' did not decide to run for public office together, however. This happened because the two are in the public service arena.

Although Lee and Yvonne have some things in common, they are as different as night and day. He is a day person and she is a night person. While she is asleep, Lee is at work and while he's sleeping, she's working on her campaign. Lee is health conscience, working out every morning before he goes to work. Yvonne, works herself to the bone with different appointments. She says, "despite the fact I don't work out, I don't have a lot of stress. I am upbeat and bubbly, and rarely depressed, and I have to watch television before retiring to bed at night."

They both deliberated on their weakness; Yvonne said she's too nice and Lee says he's too direct. Yvonne says, "I admit, we disagree on a lot of things, but we talk things out."

The Gates said they appreciate the support from friends and other constituents, but they

They both agree it hasn't always been easy, the discour-

DORA HARRIS

American has represented a district outside of Assembly's 6 and 7, Mrs. Harris is determined to be major player in policy making for the residents in her district. Through the many years of work and community service, Mrs. Harris has established a reputation as someone who is qualified, committed, and respected.

Looking forward to filling in the budget gap in Nevada, she wants to reform welfare laws as pertaining to payments by ADC. Mrs. Harris feels it's important to get recipients working in the job market without being penalized.

As a working mother and wife, Mrs. Harris worked her way up in the banking industry. Starting out as a teller for the American Bank of Commerce, she has been promoted several times to the current position of commercial loan officer for that financial institution. Holding this position makes her the only African-American bank officer in the state of Nevada.

Understanding throughout her life that nothing comes easy, being the oldest of eight children, and sitting on the sideline won't get the job done, she continues to lead in the fight for what she believes is right.

agements, discrimination and the defeats, but they are hanging in there. They say, "the toughest problem we are facing now is that we are both campaigning. We have no privacy, no social life and people expect a lot, but we enjoy our work and we are committed to serving the community."

An advocate for the protection of seniors, Mrs. Harris wants to make sure that the needs of people 55 years of age and older are met. One way she will explore is that higher tax burdens aren't placed on them through sales tax, but on the growing population of the state in property taxes.

Everyday learning something new from the many voters she comes in contact with, Mrs. Harris points out that she is not a politician, but a public servant that wants the best for her district, her community, her state.
