MONEY

By Terrence R. Johnson

As many parents of college age children will tell you, the cost of a child's education at a major institution feels like paying the national debt. College costs have risen over the past decade, and both parents and students may wonder whether the return on investment is worth the expense. Experts have been confronted with the following questions:

Are there any workplace advantages to being a college

'Is the job outlook any better for college graduates than for non-graduates?

* Are the financial rewards offered by employers worth the students' and parents' investment of time, energy, and most important, money?

Educators encourage students to not sell themselves short. People are known to fare better in the job market with a college degree than their peers without a degree. Specific data gathered about high school graduates versus college graduates indicates that high school graduates have a higher rate of unemployment than their college counterparts (7.0% vs. 3.0% in 1991-Department of Education). In addition, college graduates generally earn more because they are considered to have more ability than those without a de-TERRENCE R. JOHNSON gree. The income for college graduates increases with age, while for high school graduates. increases in median income are a great deal slower.

For example, in 1990, male graduates, age 25 and older, with four years of college or more, had a median income of $39,238, compared to $26,653 for male high school graduates of the same age. Women graduates, 25 years or older with four or more years of college, also fared better, earning in 1990 a median income of $28,017, compared to women high school graduates of the same age who earned only a median of $18,319.

Graduates with engineering degrees eam the highest average salaries, in excess of $40,000 per year to start. This statistic supports other studies which show a revolution is occuring in the workplace that will require Americans to have more education and greater skills. Technology has advanced to the point that to keep up in the competitive job market, individuals will need as much education and training as possible. They will be rewarded with higher incomes and a better standard of living.

The bottom line is: Yes, a college education is definitely worth the expense. Planning early for the accumulation of the necessary funds is the best possible move.

25% to $63,056,000 while deuted to our first-half success," Bradham stated. "An improving real estate market allowed us to collect interest on loans that had been on non-accrual and, also, to convert to earning assets some properties that had been carried on our books as Other Real Estate Owned.

"Further, we received a favorable impact from a change in an accounting rule which resulted in a tax benefit to the corporation. These items, when combined with a continuing strong local economy and very favorable trends in our market segment resulted in an earnings growth picture that may be difficult to sustain in future years," Bradham said.

"Irrespective of the extraordinary factors affecting our six month earnings, I am very confident that our strong performance will continue throughout 1993 and into 1994," Bradham concluded.

VA will perform program administration activities along with the Department of Labor. VA will also provide educational, vocational and readjustment counseling to qualified veterans who are interested in these services. The Department of Defense is funding $75 million earmarked for employers who provide jobs to qualified veterans.

To qualify, a veteran must have been honorably discharged from active military service after Aug. 1, 1990, and served for more than 90 days, unless discharged earlier because of a service-connected disability. Eligibility is then based on either the Defense Department's determination that the veteran's primary or secondary military occupational specialty is not readily transferable to the civilian workforce, or the veteran is unemployed at the time of application and for at least 8 of 15 weeks immediately preceding application. Eligibility also is extended to veterans discharged after Aug. 1, 1990, who have a VA service-connected disability rating of 30 percent or more.

DURATION OF THE FEDERAL EMERGENCY UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE BENEFITS CUT FOR NEWLY ELIGIBLE JOBLESS

CARSON CITY — Unemployed Nevadans who are about to exhaust their regular 26-weeks of state unemployment insurance (UI) benefits will have 10 weeks rather than 20 weeks of federallyfunded emergency benefits, the Nevada Employment Security Department announced recently.

Stan Jones, department executive director, said a part of the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act (EUC) reduces the duration of emergency jobless benefits if the national unemployment rate dips below 7 percent over a twomonth average. "The national unemployment rate dipped one-tenth of a percentage point in May to 6.9 percent, and rebounded to 7 percent in June, making the two-month average national unemployment rate slightly under 7 percent." Jones went on to explain, "Long-term unemployed Nevadans eligible to file first-time claims for EUC after July 11, will have up to 10 weeks of emergency federal jobless benefits."

He was quick to point out that EUC claims established prior to July 11, will not be affected. unemployment insurance benefits are payable to eligible workers who become unemployed through no fault of their own; have been unable to gain employment; continue to meet eligibility requirements; and are available for and actively seeking employ-
