NBA ALL-STAR WEEKEND TO FEATURE INAUGURAL SCHICK ROOKIE GAME

Sentinel-Voice

As if All-Star Saturday wasn't exciting enough during the NBA's All-Star Weekend, now it gets even better. In addition to the traditional Gatorade Slam-Dunk competition and the AT&T Long Distance Shootout, the NBA will introduce the Target center in Minneapolis to the inaugural Schick Rookie Game.

The game will feature 16 of the league's top first-year players, including: Anfernee Hardaway, Orlando; Isaiah Rider, Minnesota; and Chris Webber, Golden State.

The 16 rookies that were selected have been divided into two teams of eight, during a mock draft between Schick Rookie Game coaches Doug Collins and K.C. Jones.

Also selected to play in the Schick Rookie Game were Philadelphia's Shawn Bradley, New Jersey's P.J. Brown, Houston's Sam Cassell, Washington's Calbert Cheaney, Indiana's Antonio Davis, Detroit's Lindsey Hunter, Dallas' Popeye Jones, Chicago's Toni Kukoc, Cleveland's Chris Mills, Boston's Dino Radja, Utah's Byron Russell and Nick Van Exel of the LA Lakers. The game tips off Saturday, February 12 at 7:00 p.m.

Bobby Hurley of Sacramento was also named to the Schick Rookie Game, but will not participate because of injuries sustained in a car accident.

•SLAM-DUNK PARTICIPANTS - Competing in the Gatorade Slam-Dunk Championship will be Portland's James

Robinson, Seattle's Shawn Kemp, Denver's Robert Pack, defending champion Harold Miner of the Miami Heat, Doug Christie of the LA Lakers and Minnesota's explosive rookie Isaiah Rider. Immediately following the announcement of Rider becoming the fifth pick in the NBA Draft, the former UNLV star predicted that he would be in the competition and would win!

•SHOOTOUT PARTICIPANTS - Competing in the AT&T Long Distance Shootout will be San Antonio's Dale Ellis, Milwaukee's Eric Murdock, Chicago's B.J. Armstrong and Steve Kerr, Sacramento's Mitch Richmond, Philadelphia's Dana Barros, Dan Majerle of Phoenix, and the event's defending champion, Cleveland's Mark Price.
