lot outside his fathers place of business after finishing his shift.

Losing business and losing a son would have made a lot of people pack up and run. But not Lucius and Charlie (who the niterly is name after); the tragic death of their son and the steady loss of business make them all the more determined to stay and make things better on their corner in the 'hood', plus have their efforts serve as a living memorial for him.

After all, "Charlie's Live" on Florence over the years, had provided employment and a showcase stage for aspiring neighborhood dancers, spent advertising dollars with various neighborhood newspapers, made donations to many a worthy community cause, and was definitely one of "Tinseltown's popular gathering places for its patrons. It was also a known fact that Lucius and Charlie had helped many a down and out persons over the years.

For all the good that "Charlie's Live" on Florence had done in the inner city community since opening their doors, now the odds seemingly were against them. Slowly and surely the increase of gangs and gang related crimes started a decaying process in the neighborhood where "Charlie's Live" was located, and more than half the businesses that at one time flourished all along Florence Avenue had closed up, or moved away. Little by little, more and more of the regular patrons stopped dropping in to mix and mingle and have a drink or two, and his cash registers didn't ring as often as they once did.
