Hopkins

Hopkins' undefeated team (17-0 overall and 6-0 in division play) has one player that could be a legitimate Division I prospect in senior guard Michael Johnson.

Since he was a freshman, Hopkins has taken Johnson under his wing, attempting to mold him into a rising basketball star. He joined the junior varsity squad as a sophomore to gain a bit more experience, but stepped up big as a junior.

Now, he is attracting junior colleges and Division I attention.

Johnson, with his mother Marie, lives in North Las Vegas and has spent the majority of his life on either the Westside or North Las Vegas.

"Michael is a unique individual," says Hopkins "and because he wears his hair a little bit different from everybody else or he wears his clothes a certain way, people assume things. Some of the problems you have when you must deal with being a product of the environment, is that there are many things you are already accused of.

"This kid, to be honest with you, has been tried and convicted by people not only in our community, but definitely outside of our community."

Johnson says he just tries not to let it bother him, and can't wait to move on to a junior college next season.

Johnson's mother also says that it's just a matter of ignoring what other people say and to go on about her business. She also says she can't wait to see her son in college.

"You have to make sure you have the proper role models around you," says Hopkins. "There are two types of pushers out there. You have the people out there in the street and you got the people at home. ... The thing that I've noticed is (Mike) is growing up and he is seeing that he doesn't need that facade of him being a tough guy.

"(Mike) knows he has an opportunity to continue his education through athletics," says Hopkins. "I think that is the thing that is motivating him the most right now.
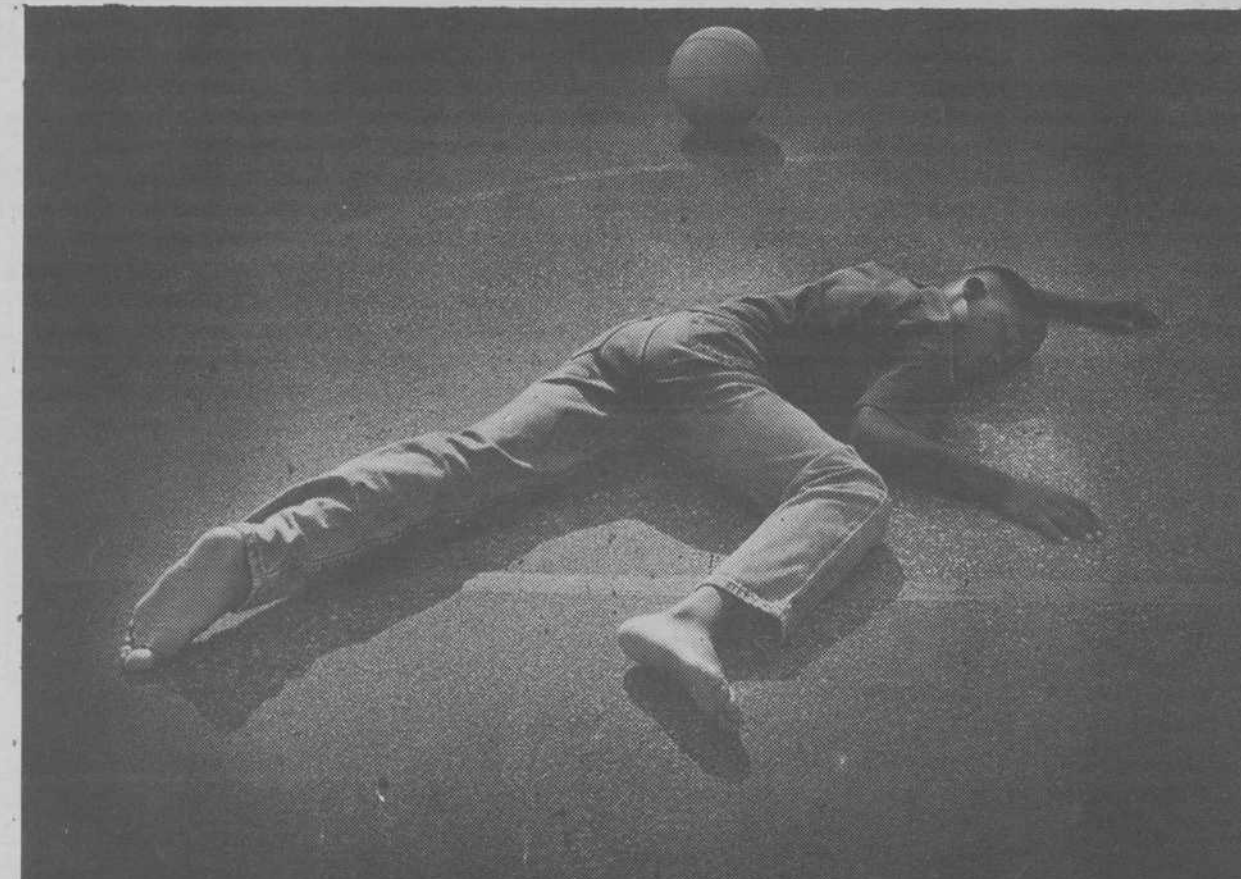

"Because he's had some problems academically, the route he's more likely gonna have to take is through a junior college."

There is no slacking when it comes to Hopkins' squad, as he strictly enforces the usage of study halls. He keeps a close eye on all of his players, not to mention other student-athletes that don't even play basketball.

During the football season, Rancho running back Charles Criner was rumored to have quit the team, but actually was dealing with some personal problems. Hopkins was instrumental in helping Criner while keeping him on the gridiron.

"To be a high school coach" says Aznarez, "you must have a strong humanistic approach when dealing with kids. Tony has that."
