The Revolution At Future U.

(Part 1)

By Keith A. Brantley (Izulu Poets)

On the sidewalk of future university, the last anniversary of what we were. "What were we?"

We were Black and Beautiful. Now we're just Black. Beauty has gone to dwell in the eye of the beholder. As the old school gets older; it is no longer a given. Our beauty is derived from those who see us but they are liars all.

Young students are heeding the words or professor Rodney (the Prophet) "Can't we all just get along?" Future University is universally the place of higher forgiveness.
