personnel, he said. Rather than offering the traditional 16-week semester, eight-week semesters are offered at Nellis with two taking place in the fall, two in the spring, and one in the summer.

Because the semesters are shorter, classes are offered on a more intensive basis.

Quade said the main reason these programs are so popular with Air Force personnel is that they are frequently sent on temporary duty assignments to other locations, and many would not be able to complete a 16-week course.

Another important factor, according to Roscoe McGee, the Air Force's education services officer at Nellis, is the cost. "The price is good," he said. "Tuition is not expensive, so it enables most people to work toward a bachelor's degree."

in the philosophy department at the University of Virginia, speaks at UNLV.

Rorty maintains that both those to the left and those to the right in American politics spend an amazing amount of time discussing "cultural issues" and much too little time discussing economic issues. It would be better to spend time discussing the economic inequities that are splitting America apart than to spend it talking about deconstructionism, multiculturalism, prayer in schools, abortion, and family values, according to Rorty. His presentation is being co-sponsored by UNLV's philosophy department.

Ramadan the month of fasting for the Muslims began Monday January 21. During this month Muslims fast from sun up to sun down. During the fasting period Muslims abstain from eating all food, drinking water and having sex. Fasting is a sacrifice that teaches discipline. The fast is broken after sundown by eating a date. Understand the needs of your Muslim friends and help them get through this month. Ramadan is a Muslim's gift to Allah.

West Las Vegas Library had a sell out crowd at Saturday's only performance of the Lula Washington Contemporary Dance Theatre from Los Angeles.

Las Vegas resident Gladys Knight's show at the MGM was fabulous. Gladys introduced a lovely young lady Serena Henry, whose powerful voice will propel her to stardom. Gladys Knight and the Pips were inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame earlier this month. Byron Allen the comedian opened for her and had us all in stitches.

The National Conference selected Dora (Harris) La Grande, Richard Steele, John Tait, Jean Nidetch, Tom Saitta and Dave Griego as their 1996 Community Heroes. A community hero is a person who through long-term community involvement or by a single heroic act has improved appreciation of diverse publics in Southern Nevada. Each of the heroes selected have been active advocates in the fight to increase respect, tolerance and understanding in the community for people of diverse races, religions and cultures. The awards will be presented February 1, 1996 at Caesars Palace. Call 387-6225 for further information.
