In addition, from Boston to Portland, local, state and federal officials have pledged their support and participation.

In Boston, Joan Wallace-Benjamin, president of the Urban League of Eastern Massachusetts, said that the city's school superintendent, Thomas

Payzant, and the regional head of the federal Department of Education, Jan L. Paschal, will speak at the ceremonies there at Roxbury Community College. And in Portland both Oregon Governor John Kitzhaber and Portland Mayor Vera Katz have proclaimed the day "Doing the Right Thing Day," and Portland School Superintendent Jack Bierwirth has been an enthusiastic supporter, according to Lawrence J. Dark, our affiliate's president.

The flyer announcing the event in Portland asks the question at the heart of our campaign: "Do you believe that our children are our future? Do you want to support our youth?" If you do, then, join us.

looking at the larger problems of the decreasing number of jobs in our economy. We have lost 5 million factory jobs in the past 15 years and at least one economist predicts the end of the blue collar job as we know it by the year 2020. Some 750,000 secretarial jobs have been eliminated from the economy, never to return. These job losses have enormous impact on the unemployed poor.

Nearly a generation ago Congressman Gus Hawkins and Senator Hubert Humphrey introduced a bill calling for a Full Employment Economy in this nation. If we had passed that bill then, perhaps we would not be in this predicament now.
