

Annual choreographers showcase to dance on stage next weekend

Special to Sentinel-Voice

The 19th annual Choreographers Showcase will be on stage at the Charleston Heights Arts Center, 800 South Brush, at 2 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 21 and Sunday, Feb. 22. Advance tickets are $10 for adults, and $8 for students, seniors and disabled. Call 229-6383. Tickets at the door are $12 and $10 respectively.

The showcase serves as an outlet for local dancers to experiment and display choreographic talent in an artistic setting. To be in the showcase, choreographers audition and are selected by a panel of judges.

This year's program will include works by George Staib II, Jerri Willis, Shanique Carson, Carlynn Mazon, Barbi

Evans, Christopher R. H. Robinson, Indranee Clarke, Ktryna Paul, Sumayah Ramadan, George Kiernan, Szolt Szorenyi, and Sharon Lynn. The choreography features a variety of dance styles including modern, jazz, and tap.

Featured on the program will be a piece by the award-winning choreographer Kathryn Posin, performed by UNLV Dance Department students. Posin most recently was awarded a choreography fellowship by the National Endowment for the Arts.

For more information, call 229-6383.

states that perform best in designated areas. The largest portion of the money, $80 million per year or 40 percent, will be given to winners in the job entry category.

Winners in the success in the work force category will share $50 million, or 25 percent of the total.

States showing most improvement in the job entry category will share $40 million, and those improving most in the success in the work force category will share $30 million.

The amount of money each of the winning 10 states gets will depend on the size of their regular block grant.

There are four areas of judgement; each is judged individually. So up to 40 states could theoretically get some money.

States will be judged on:

- Job entry: the number of welfare recipients who got jobs that year, whether they remained on the rolls or not. Many welfare recipients work but make so little money that they still qualify for assistance.

- Success in the work force: a combination of the number of recipients who kept a job from one quarter to the next, and the increase in their incomes.

- Improvement: how much states improved over the previous year in each of the above categories.

Air Jordans score loot for scholarship fund

Special to Sentinel-Voice

HAVRE, Mont. — Turns out Spike Lee was right. "It's gotta be the shoes."

A pair of well-worn, autographed Air Jordans basketball shoes from 1986 — the year that basketball superstar Michael Jordan launched the Nike brand — will be sold to benefit a college scholarship fund.

Marty Foxman, an academic counselor at Montana State University-Northern, is donating the red, white and black hightops to raise scholarship money for the school's American Indian students.

He bought the shoes several years ago at a Goodwill store for $2.75.

"They were in good shape. Some yuppie had thrown or given them away," Foxman said. "I wore them for a bunch of years, and they lived in the bottom of my locker."

Foxman persuaded a Northern alumnus at Nike to get Jordan to autograph the shoes. Sports memorabilia dealers routinely sell vintage Air Jordans for around $500.

In commercials that started in the late 1980s, Lee, playing Jordan fan Morris Blackman, touted the shoes as the reason the high-flying Chicago Bulls star could perform his gravity-defying acrobatics.
