

Ashcroft

(Continued from Page 11) widely respected and with a long record of service as an attorney and a judge, as "pro criminal," surely one of the most astonishing charges ever made against a nominee for the federal court.

drew heavy criticism not only from civil rights groups, but from the editorial pages of numerous newspapers around the country, including those in Missouri.

Does Mr. Ashcroft's high profile role in defeating a qualified black nominee for the federal court reveal any deficiencies of judgement or temperament that will affect his recommending future candidates for the bench—beginning with the Supreme Court?

It's long been said that the Senate of the United States is the most exclusive "club" in the world, and that club is by tradition always gracious to former colleagues. We can expect it to be no less so for Mr. Ashcroft.

At the same time, however, the confirmation process isn't supposed to be a cakewalk. The Senate has a greater responsibility here: To the tradition and duties of the office of Attorney General and to the people of the United States.

It must assure us all of this nominee's fitness to serve.
