

Bunker

from the neighborhood, harmless and unable to change, caught in a time warp. Perhaps the same time warp that engulfed Thomas Blanton, who was convicted of the 1960s bombing the 16th Street Baptist Church in Birmingham, Ala., or Mayor Charles H. Robinson of York, Pa., who is accused of leading a mini race war that claimed the life of a Black woman shot to death by a White gang in 1969.

Or maybe "Archie" knew the jail house mentor of the men who dragged James Byrd to his death along a rural Texas road in 1998, scattering his body parts along the way.

"Archie Bunker" never led a lynch mob, but the "Bunker-ish" attitude allows for modern lynch mobs that target Blacks, whether in police departments, courts or social service agencies.

"Archie Bunker" is guilty just as the masses of Germans who didn't light the fires for ovens during the Jewish Holocaust are guilty. Doing nothing is seen as assent. It only takes one person to light a fire; it takes a crowd to give silent approval.

Images do matter. They help to legitimize, uplift and protect or dehumanize, violate and make expendable. So the world may miss Mr. O'Connor, but don't grieve for "Archie Bunker." He's alive and well.
