"Taste of Honey" Van Owens, the men of Black Ty Promotions bringing the ladies of Las Vegas Freeky Phantoms Entertainment. In a nut shell ladies, I inquired about the reality of the situation and they all said to tell the ladies, "it's straight up 6:00." Friday nite at 7:00 PM, you might want to be there when they shout "Ladies Lock-Up."

I promised to take you to as many new spots as we can find, how about some card slapping, stuff talking, no trump - no hand bidding and all that goes along with a good ole' bid whist game. It is that time of year again when the sisters of Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority Inc. and the Spear Foundation get together and throw their annual Bid Whist and Spades Tournament. The games begin February 16th at the Clark County Government Center. For more information call Joyce Thomas at 657-2085 or 243-6700.

Jackson

while escorting them in public - for fear of kidnap attempts, he says - and they appeared in the program wearing masks. He often wears a surgical mask himself, although he shed it for the documentary.

In one scene, Jackson was shown cradling Prince Michael II - nicknamed Blanket - as he fed him a bottle of milk.

Bashir - well known for an interview with Princess Diana, during which she admitted being unfaithful to Prince Charles - spent eight months making the program, which will be shown in the United States at 8 p.m. EST Thursday on ABC's "20/20."

He visited Jackson at Neverland, accompanied him on a Las Vegas shopping spree and was at a Berlin hotel in November when Jackson sparked worldwide outrage by briefly dangling Prince Michael II from a fourth-floor hotel balcony.

Fans outside the building cheered, but tabloids accused Jackson of reckless endangerment. Since then, the 44-year-old singer has called the incident a "terrible mistake." But during the documentary, Jackson denied he had endangered the baby's life.

"I would never do that to my children, or any child. We were waving to thousands of fans down below and they were chanting they wanted to see my child, so I was kind enough to let them see," he told Bashir. "They got the full experience and he enjoyed it."

Jackson denied having had any alterations to his face other than two operations on his nose because "it helped me breathe better so I can hit higher notes."

"I am telling you the honest truth," he said. "I didn't do anything to my face."

Jackson became a child star singing with his brothers in the Jackson 5, and later had one of the most successful albums of all time, 1982's "Thriller," which sold an estimated 26 million copies in the United States.

He had strong follow-up albums with 1987's "Bad" and 1991's "Dangerous," but his career began to collapse in 1993 after he was accused of molesting a boy. Jackson has maintained his innocence, and reached a multimillion-dollar settlement. Jackson became visibly upset when Bashir asked about the case, saying he had paid the family to avoid "a long, drawn-out thing on TV like O.J." Simpson.
