The Ukrainian, who has a Ph.D. degree, put up a heroic effort in his L.A. Staples Center bout with Lennox Lewis, before the bout was stopped by a doctor due to a severe cut over Klitschko's left eye. Lewis retired from boxing and Klitschko defeated South Africa's Corrie Sanders to capture the WBC title.

Before he left for New York, Byrd said, "I am having fun now. I have to do what the organizations say. If you don't fight the mandated challenger, they will strip you of your title, I am willing to do just what they and the promoters say."

While attending a recent James Toney bout in Los Angeles, Byrd was challenged by Toney on the television and before the hosts of the Best Damn Sports Show.

Byrd said he would be glad to take on Toney but it has to be sanctioned by his IBF organization.

Senator John McCain, from Arizona, would like to see a commissioner like they have in baseball, football, hockey, and basketball. Would the commissioner be able to get Bob Arum, Don King, or Dan Goosen, or any of the other promoters to sit down and talk about making a sport that the fans like and trust?

And who is the real heavy-weight champion? Ring Magazine gave their belt to Klitschko recently at Caesars Palace. A little racism there. With Byrd, Brewster, and Ruiz, all champions, and they gave the Ring Belt to the Russian. Did the real champion stand up? Danny Williams thinks Ring made a mistake and he will change that on December 11.

"As long as the world saw Palestinians as no more than refugees standing in line for U.N. rations, it was not likely to respect them. Now that the Palestinians carry rifles the situation has changed," Arafat explained.
