calm. I had a very calm feeling the entire week, especially today."

It was his 49th career victory, and the $1.3 million for first place put him atop the money list and pushed him over $60 million for his career. The next stop for Woods is the PGA Championship at Medinah, near Chicago, where he won in 1999. Woods now has three British Open titles, the same as Nicklaus, and his victory at Hoylake carried another comparison. The first major Nicklaus won after his father died in 1970 also was the British Open.

What would Earl Woods have thought of this victory?

"He would have been very proud," Woods said. "He was always on my case about thinking my way around the golf course and not letting emotions get the better of you."

And son Woods didn't — until he knew he had the claret jug firmly in his grasp.
