By all measures, Brand likes the progress.

"I'd say the academic achievement of our student-athletes over the last several years is one of our greatest success stories," he said.

Among the more notable findings over a four-year period were that female athletes earned diplomas at a significantly higher rate, 71 percent, than their male counterparts, 56 percent; and that Blacks (53 percent) and Hispanics (58 percent) continued to lag behind other ethnicities when earning diplomas.

Whites had the highest federal score at 67 percent.

Brand also cited a 3-point increase under the federal guidelines, from 43 to 46 percent, for men's basketball players and a 4-point jump, from 38 to 42 percent, among Black players.

"Four points in one year is a very serious move upward and it's 5 percent higher than African-American students in the general student body."

Four schools — Boston College, Bucknell, Duke and Northwestern — graduated at least 90 percent of their athletes over the one-year period. Duke, at 91 percent, had the highest rating. The other three each had 90 percent rates, but Bucknell was the only school of the top four to exceed its overall student body grad rate (88 percent).

The three lowest scores belonged to Florida A&M (19 percent), Texas-Pan American (21 percent) and Lamar (30 percent) although Lamar's total was only 1 point lower than its overall total.

The three military academies — Army, Navy and Air Force — received no one-year scores for their athletes.

The report includes only student athletes receiving scholarships, which the military academies don't have.

Darfur

The African Union force has been unable to curb violence in Darfur, where more than 200,000 people have been killed and 2.5 million displaced since the conflict began in February 2003, when ethnic African tribesmen took up arms against the Arab-led government in Khartoum.

U.N. investigators and rights groups have blamed the worst atrocities on the Janjaweed, a pro-government militia that is widely accused of killing villagers and destroying their homes. The government denies supporting the militia.
