(Continued from Page 10) viously filed for a new trial based on the discovered information, but the judge denied that motion. Jones said he spoke several times on Sharpton's New York-based talk-radio program trying to gain support for his son and the other students charged.

Sharpton had previously visited Bell in jail and attended local rallies for the Jena Six. "I invited him to come," Jones said. "I believe that White people are going to take it to their grave — hating Blacks," added Jones, who said he moved back to Jena from his Dallas home where he worked as a security guard. He vows to stay there to help his son clear his name.
