"They understand where they are with Christ, and they understand where the talent is coming from, and they have no need or desire to even think about something as ridiculous as cheating with steroids."

Though Holland has a list of personal accomplishments, as a born again Christian, she is quick to give honor to God first. She said she attended Regent "specifically because it was a Christian law school."

She graduated from Regent in Virginia Beach, Va., and then became a legislative foreign policy aide to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, and the only African-American female on his personal staff.

This experience gave her the foundation to perfect a craft stereotypically dominated by White males, preparing her for the road ahead.

Holland has become an exception in sports today, but Black athletes hiring White sports agents has been commonplace.

A new kid on the block, she was faced with hurdles associated with being an anomaly in the industry.

"People are going to see what you're made of," Holland explained, "I have been

The book was released on the same day the case was scheduled to go to trial, though the trial has since been postponed to Sept. 8.

Simpson lawyer Yale Galanter dismissed any effect the book might have on the trial.

"What he says in the book doesn't really mean anything to me," Galanter said from his office in Miami. "It's not sworn testimony."

Riccio, 45, who testified in a preliminary hearing in November, was granted immunity from prosecution in the case.

Much of the book details his childhood and the shadowy world of sports memorabilia deals. He skims over his arrests and federal imprisonments in Danbury, Conn., and Terminal Island, Calif., and a state prison stint in Soledad, Calif.

told I should be home baking cookies, and you should be home trying to have some kids.

"That's very disrespectful, but those things happened very early on," Holland continued. "I'm still here and I'm one of the top agents and you can't dismiss the success that I've had lately."

During her first competition managing an athlete, she attempted to introduce herself to the competition director. The whispers became resounding, "here comes that lady agent" and he never came out to meet her.

"It was my God, my first client who believed me," Holland notes. "I didn't have anyone I strived to be like. My goal was to be a trend setter, or pioneer, or trailblazer myself. I wanted to be different and better than all of them."

This July, Holland will begin her certification for the NFL, as she looks to further expand the Icon roster. Challenging the norm has given her the credence to smile with clear confidence.

"I'm six [years] into this now, so I can comfortably say I'm one of the most competitive sports agents out there in my industry."

The Olympic torch relay entitled "Journey of Harmony" will reach Beijing on August 24, symbolizing the start of the 2008 Summer Olympic Games.

Two months removed from celebrating Black history, and days removed from celebrating Women's history, it's harmony that Kimberly Holland would be representing a group of potential medal winners.

She concludes, "Go with God, go with grace, go with your passion, and watch how God will bless you more than you can imagine — I'm a living testimony of that."

PUBLIC NOTICE CITY OF LAS VEGAS PRIVATE ACTIVITY BONDS/ IDR BONDS FY 2008 ALLOCATION

The city of Las Vegas announces the availability of approximately $30,379,716 of Private Activity Bonds/Industrial Development Revenue Bonds (bond cap/tax exempt financing) to further affordable housing and economic development within its jurisdictional boundaries. This public notice is an invitation to developers to submit an application for affordable multi-family housing development projects and/or economic development projects.

The multi-family housing projects must consist of either 20% of rental units targeted for individuals and families at or below 50% of median income or 40% of rental units targeted for individuals and families at or below 60% of median income. Further details are available in the application package.

Economic development projects shall include any type of economic development activity and manufacturing activities throughout the city of Las Vegas.

The City intends to use one-half of its volume cap for affordable housing development, and one-half for economic development; however, if sufficient applications are not received for economic development, the City's next priority would be to use the total volume cap for multi-family housing.

All applications must be submitted to the City's Neighborhood Services Department. The acceptance of an application by the City does not commit the City to issue a resolution transferring volume cap to the project.

Applications and a copy of the policy and guidelines are available beginning Monday, April 14, 2008, from ldixon@lasvegasnevada.gov or
City of Las Vegas
Neighborhood Services Department
2nd Floor, 400 Stewart Avenue
Las Vegas, Nevada 89101

Questions concerning the application may be directed to Leonard Dixon at 229-2120. The city's TDD Number is (702) 386-9108.
The deadline for SUBMITTING applications is MAY 28, 2008, AT 4:00 P.M.
