Historical Background

Mandalay Resort Group was, until its acquisition by MGM Mirage in 2005, the largest hotel and casino corporation in Las Vegas, Nevada by square footage of casino space and number of hotel rooms. Known as Circus Circus Enterprises, Inc. until June 1999, Mandalay Resort Group operated ten hotel and casinos in Nevada, including four properties on the Las Vegas Strip: Mandalay Bay, Luxor, Excalibur, and Circus Circus.

In 1968, Jay Sarno opened Circus Circus, the first casino of what would eventually become Mandalay Resort Group. The casino opened without hotel rooms but later in 1972, a 400-room, fifteen story hotel tower was added. In February 1974, the casino and hotel operation were incorporated as Circus Circus Enterprises, Inc. Three months later the company was purchased by William N. Pennington and William G. Bennett, a former furniture store executive who became chairman and CEO of the company. In the following year, a second hotel tower was opened. Four years later in 1978, the company duplicated the Las Vegas operations in Reno, Nevada, opening a second Circus Circus casino and hotel in a space that had formerly been a department store. In April 1988, the company purchased a large parcel of land once owned by Howard Hughes on the Las Vegas Strip. On this site the castle themed Excalibur opened in June 1990. In November 1991, Circus Circus announced development plans for the other half of its land on the Las Vegas Strip next to Excalibur called "Project X," later named Luxor. It featured an Egyptian theme and opened in 1993.

In 1995, Circus Circus acquired Gold Strike Resorts. About one hundred of the company's managers had once worked at Circus Circus, including Glen Schaeffer and Michael S. Ensign, who was a principal partner in Gold Strike. Ensign became vice-chairman and chief operating officer of Circus Circus, while Schaeffer became president and CFO. The acquisition came with a fifty percent stake in the Monte Carlo property being developed by Mirage Resorts. Monte Carlo Hotel and Casino opened in 1996 on the former site of the Dunes Hotel.

Construction of the company's largest hotel and casino, called "Project Paradise," began in 1997. Officially named Mandalay Bay, the property opened in 1999 on the former site of the Hacienda Hotel which had been imploded in 1996. Circus Circus moved its headquarters to Mandalay Bay and changed the company name to Mandalay Resort Group in June 1999. In 2004 MGM Mirage, Circus Circus's major competitor on the Strip, announced a bid to acquire Mandalay Resort Group. After a year of negotiations the transaction was finalized in April 2005.
