Historical Background

The Nevada Desert Experience (NDE) was founded in Oakland, California in 1984 to organize protests against nuclear weapons and nuclear testing at the Nevada Test Site (NTS) 65 miles outside of Las Vegas, Nevada. It is a Franciscan and Roman Catholic organization with roots in earlier movements started by Quakers in 1957. In 1977, to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of Quaker protests at the NTS, Sister Rosemary Lynch organized a similar event, and over the next five years, Lynch and several others returned to the NTS to protest. In 1982, in celebration of Saint Francis of Assisi's 800th birthday and the 25th anniversary of the Quaker protest, Lynch, Father Louis Vitale, theology student Michael Affleck, and others organized a six-week protest at the NTS to coincide with the Christian observance of Lent. The organizers and participants decided to hold a protest annually, calling it the Lenten Desert Experience.

The 1983 protest further inspired the participants to create a formal organization, and they incorporated the Nevada Desert Experience in May 1984. The following year, the NDE organized the first August Desert Witness, which would become another annual event.

Between 1986 and 1994, more than 536 demonstrations were held at the NTS, leading to almost 16,000 arrests, including the arrests of six Democratic members of the U.S. Congress, actors Martin Sheen, Robert Blake, and Kris Kristofferson, and astronomer Carl Sagan. In 1992, the United States halted its full-scale nuclear weapons testing, but the NDE continues protesting for environmental justice and international peace, particularly focusing on efforts against U.S. drone attacks.
