Biographical Note

"The Treniers," or later "The Rockin' Rollin' Treniers," was a band based around twins Clifton L. "Cliff" Trenier and Claude Oliver Trenier. They were born in Mobile, Alabama. In 1943, Claude Trenier joined Jimmie Lunceford's band as lead singer, and Cliff joined a year later. However, the twins left the Lunceford band in 1947 and began performing together as the Trenier Twins, backed by the Gene Gilbeaux Quartet and made their first recordings for Mercury Records in 1947.

The group developed a reputation for their lively performances. In 1949, they were joined by older brother Buddy Trenier, and started to be billed as "The Rockin' Rollin' Treniers."

They had their only national chart hit in 1951, when "Go! Go! Go!" reached number ten on the R&B chart, but several other records including "It Rocks! It Rolls! It Swings!" (1952) and "Rockin' Is Our Bizness" (1953) were popular. The group was considered a strong influence on many of their contemporaries, and one of the first times rock and roll appeared on national television was in May 1954 when the Treniers appeared on the Colgate Comedy Hour, hosted by Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis.
