Abstract:	Oral history interview with Norma Norman conducted by Dorothy Richardson-Martin on November 30, 2004 for the Public School Principalsip Oral History Project. In this interview, Norman reflects upon her experience as an elementary school administrator in California's Hayward Unified School District. She discusses her experience as a female African American teacher in the 1960s and 1970s, and how those experiences shaped her approach to school administration. She also discusses school district programs and policies, and how such programs impact different populations of students.
