Scope and Contents Note

Oral history interview with Nanyu Tomiyasu conducted by Sosuke Miyazawa on March 11, 1978 for the Ralph Roske Oral History Project on Early Las Vegas. Tomiyasu begins by talking about what brought his family to Las Vegas, the city's abundant water reservoir and his father's farm. In particular, Tomiyasu discusses his father's experiments with farming as one of the city's early farmers, the transition into nursery farming and Japanese gardens. Moreover, he discusses his siblings, the local schools, their great quality, the successful students the city produced and the growth of school populations. Tomiyasu describes the large Japanese population and the Union Pacific Railroad that many of them worked on. He ends by discussing the change in architecture within the city, such as where old buildings stood and what they are used for now, the first Episcopal Church and the old Mormon Fort. Digital audio and transcript available.
