

Guide to the Charles Quander oral history interview

---

This finding aid was created by UNLV Special Collections and Archives staff. This copy was published on January 17, 2023. Please contact special.collections@unlv.edu for questions regarding this collection.

Persistent URL for this finding aid: <http://n2t.net/ark:/62930/f1pv19>

© 2023 The Regents of the University of Nevada. All rights reserved.

University of Nevada, Las Vegas. University Libraries. Special Collections and Archives.

Box 457010

4505 S. Maryland Parkway

Las Vegas, Nevada 89154-7010

special.collections@unlv.edu

---

Table of Contents

---

Summary Information .....	3
Scope and Contents Note .....	4
Administrative Information .....	4
Names and Subjects .....	5

---

Summary Information

---

Repository:	University of Nevada, Las Vegas. University Libraries. Special Collections and Archives.
Creator:	Quander, Charles (Charles Johnson), 1925-2008
Contributor:	African Americans in Las Vegas: a Collaborative Oral History Project
Title:	Charles Quander oral history interview
ID:	OH-03285
Date:	2005 October 27
Physical Description:	2 Digital Files (0.070 GB) MP3
Language of the Material:	English
Abstract:	Oral history interview with Charles Quander conducted by Claytee D. White on October 27, 2005 for the African Americans in Las Vegas: a Collaborative Oral History Project. Quander, who served as a flight officer in the Army Air Corps first all-Black fighter and bomber squadrons known collectively as the Tuskegee Airmen, talks about his upbringing in Washington, D.C., his early interest in flight, and his decision to train as a pilot at the outset of World War II. Quander talks about his training and reflects on both the process of learning to fly and the discrimination that the cadets experienced from the predominately white senior officers. He then talks about his post-military education and his career with the federal government, working as an investigator for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (ATF) and the United States Attorney's strike force on organized crime. He ends the interview describing his retirement and travel, his move to Las Vegas, Nevada, and his views on war, the Department of Homeland Security, and his perceptions of Las Vegas' growth.

Preferred Citation

Charles Quander oral history interview, 2005 October 27. OH-03285. [Cite format consulted: Audio recording or Transcript.] Oral History Research Center, Special Collections and Archives, University Libraries, University of Nevada, Las Vegas. Las Vegas, Nevada.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Contents Note

---

Oral history interview with Charles Quander conducted by Claytee D. White on October 27, 2005 for the African Americans in Las Vegas: a Collaborative Oral History Project. Quander, who served as a flight officer in the Army Air Corps first all-Black fighter and bomber squadrons known collectively as the Tuskegee Airmen, talks about his upbringing in Washington, D.C., his early interest in flight, and his decision to train as a pilot at the outset of World War II. As a teenager, he was enrolled in the Tuskegee Institute cadet corps, where he studied aeronautical engineering and learned the basics of flight before entering flight school at Keesler Field (now Keesler Air Force Base) in Biloxi, Mississippi. Quander talks about his training and reflects on both the process of learning to fly and the discrimination that the cadets experienced from the predominately white senior officers. He then explains his decision to switch from single-engine fighter training to multi-engine bombardier training as soon as it was available. This led to his reassignment to the 477th Bombardment Group, stationed in Indiana, where he and his fellow Black officers were subjected to pervasive discrimination. Further training in the B-25 "Mitchell" bomber sent him to Arizona and his eventual graduation coincided with the end of the War. Quander then talks about his post-military education and his career with the federal government, working as an investigator for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (ATF) and the United States Attorney's strike force on organized crime. He ends the interview describing his retirement and travel, his move to Las Vegas, Nevada, and his views on war, the Department of Homeland Security, and his perceptions of Las Vegas' growth. Digital audio available; no transcript available.

^ Return to Table of Contents

---

Administrative Information

---

Access Note

Collection is open for research. Where use copies do not exist, production of use copies is required before access will be granted; this may delay research requests. Advanced notice is required.

Publication Rights

Materials in this collection may be protected by copyrights and other rights. See Reproductions and Use on the UNLV Special Collections and Archives website for more information about reproductions and permissions to publish. Some transcripts do not exist in final form, therefore any editing marks in a transcript (deletions, additions, corrections) are to be quoted as marked. No release form is on file for this interview. The interview is accessible onsite only, and researchers must seek permission from the interviewee or heirs for quotation, reproduction, or publication. Please contact special.collections@unlv.edu for further information.

Acquisition Note

This interview was conducted and transcribed by the Oral History Research Center (OHRC) which is part of the UNLV University Libraries Special Collections and Archives Division.

Processing Note

Interview materials were processed by UNLV Libraries Special Collections and Archives in 2018 and 2023. Melise Leech wrote the collection description. Access copies were created for born-digital audio and/or transcript files. The audio has been minimally reviewed and all readily available information has been included in the description.

^ Return to Table of Contents

---

Names and Subjects

---

- Tuskegee Airmen
- World War, 1939-1945
- Race discrimination
- Airplanes, Military
- Las Vegas (Nev.)
- United States. Army Air Forces. Bombardment Group, 477th