Historical Background

The Union Pacific Railroad Company helped build the first transcontinental railroad in North America, which it completed when it met the Central Pacific Railroad line at Promontory Summit, Utah, in 1869. The company was incorporated in 1862 and commissioned to construct railroads from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean. By the beginning of the twentieth century, the Union Pacific owned tracks throughout the Western United States, including Nevada, California, Oregon, Washington, and Utah.
